

A PANTRY SYSTEM

The Considered Pantry

Built around how you actually cook, not how a photograph looks.
Label sheets in the house type, three zone maps for three kitchen shapes, and a restock sheet you refill instead of rewriting.

Ten pages · Letter · labels sized for standard jars and bins

Zones first, containers second, labels last.

Most pantries fail in the buying: matching jars before anyone has decided what goes where. This runs the other way.

1 · ZONE

Choose the map for your kitchen's shape on the next three pages. Each shelf gets one job. Everyday things sit at eye level nearest the stove; backstock sits furthest away and gets counted, not browsed.

2 · CONTAIN

Decant only what you buy in bags and use often: flour, oats, rice, pasta. Everything else stays in its packaging with the label facing out. A basket per category holds the small things; the basket is the limit.

3 · LABEL

Print the label sheets on plain paper or full-sheet sticker stock, cut on the lines, and fix them at the same height on every jar. The blank sheet is for your own words.

4 · RESTOCK

The last page is a sheet you keep on the inside of the door. Tick when something runs low; photograph it before you shop. It ends the duplicate-buying problem for good.

The galley

Two facing runs. Cooking on one side, storing on the other, and the aisle kept clear.

Put the things you reach for while a pan is hot on the cooking side. Everything that waits for a shopping list goes opposite.

MY SHELVES, TOP TO BOTTOM

The L-shape

The corner is the problem and the opportunity. Give it one job and one long basket per shelf.

A lazy susan turns the dead corner into the easiest shelf in the room. Two long, shallow baskets do the same for less.

MY SHELVES, TOP TO BOTTOM

The single wall

One run, left to right, from what you count to what you cook with.

With a single wall the order matters more than the containers. Backstock at the far end, everyday at the stove end, and snacks in a basket you can lift out and put away.

MY SHELVES, TOP TO BOTTOM

Dry goods

 Flour INTERIORCLEANSE	 Sugar INTERIORCLEANSE	 Oats INTERIORCLEANSE
 Rice INTERIORCLEANSE	 Pasta INTERIORCLEANSE	 Lentils INTERIORCLEANSE
 Coffee INTERIORCLEANSE	 Tea INTERIORCLEANSE	 Salt INTERIORCLEANSE

Cut on the outer line. Full-sheet sticker stock or plain paper with a glue stick both hold on glass.

Baskets and the rest

Beans
INTERIORCLEANSE

Cocoa
INTERIORCLEANSE

Granola
INTERIORCLEANSE

Nuts
INTERIORCLEANSE

Seeds
INTERIORCLEANSE

Honey
INTERIORCLEANSE

Breakfast
INTERIORCLEANSE

Snacks
INTERIORCLEANSE

Backstock
INTERIORCLEANSE

Your own words

Write in pencil first. The names that survive a month get ink.

What we are low on

Keep it on the inside of the door. Tick, do not write. Photograph it before you leave the house.

ITEM	LOW	OUT	BOUGHT	WHERE IT LIVES
Flour	☐	☐	☐
Oats	☐	☐	☐
Rice	☐	☐	☐
Pasta	☐	☐	☐
Coffee	☐	☐	☐
Tea	☐	☐	☐
Olive oil	☐	☐	☐
Salt	☐	☐	☐
Tinned tomatoes	☐	☐	☐
Beans	☐	☐	☐
Stock	☐	☐	☐
Dish soap	☐	☐	☐
Cloths	☐	☐	☐
Bin liners	☐	☐	☐
	☐	☐	☐
	☐	☐	☐
	☐	☐	☐
	☐	☐	☐

KEEPING IT

The five-minute pantry reset

- ☐ Labels forward, oldest to the front
- ☐ One basket lifted out, emptied, wiped, refilled
- ☐ Backstock counted; the restock sheet ticked
- ☐ Crumbs out of the decanted-goods shelf
- ☐ One thing you have not used in a year, out

NOTES